TEARS PILOT IS ALIVE

Family Sheds Tears of Joy

JERRY O'LEARY, JR.
Star Writer

the parents and five sisters of Francis G. Powers burst into tears of happiness today as their home in Mill Creek, West Virginia, learned the American pilot was safe and sound somewhere in Russia.

"Thank God! That's what we've been hoping for," said father, Oliver W. Powers, a cobbler in mountainous County, Va., about 350 miles from Washington.

The 30-year-old pilot's mother, who is suffering from a heart condition, cried along with the rest of the family as word first reached them from Soviet Premier Khrushchev that his son was still alive.

One of Mr. Khrushchev's sons said her brother had escaped being on an intelligence mission, a sister, Joyce Melvin, 21, said.

"That's just not true. It's not possible."

Blamed by Cossacks

She said the family was blamed by the Russian charges at the suggestion from the Soviet leader that her brother might be tried as a spy.

Another sister, Mrs. Janice Melvin of 1804 Nealon Drive, in Church, Va., said word of Mr. Khrushchev's announcement about her brother came from the New York Times at 11 a.m. today.

"None of us were sleepy," Mrs. Melvin told The Star. "We were too upset for that. All of us thought he was dead. We were hoping against hope."

Mrs. Melvin, wife of an American Oil Co. employee, said her family has received no official word that Mr. Powers is safe from any Government source.

Phone Call Planned

"We'll call them today to see if it's possible for us to make a telephone call through to friends in Russia," said Mrs. Melvin.

Rock, between Found and Clintwood, Va., when they were told the family's only son was safe.

A second daughter from the Washington area is Mrs. Jessica Hileman of 318 Audrey Lane, Glassmanor, Md. Her husband, William, is a circulation reporter for the Washington Daily News.

Alfred Hileman, 46, with their group of five children, deal are son Oliver, 35, and Mrs. Joann Melvin, both of Poland, and Mrs. Powers, who lives at home.

The family had last heard from Mr. Powers in November when he was on leave from Adana, Turkey, where he has been stationed with his wife for the past four years.

Mr. Hileman said Mr. Powers' wife Barbara is a native of Albany, Ga. The couple has been married about five years, he said.

Mrs. Melvin said her brother had been in the Air Force but left that service more than four years ago.

The pilot was born August 17, 1928, at Jenkins, Ky., but had lived most of his life in Columbus, Ga., and southwest Virginia. His father owns the Norton Shoe Shop in Norton, Va.

As a youth, they said, he was athletically inclined, playing football at Grimsley (Va.) High School and participating in track, later off. He ran the 440-yard dash and the 880-yard run at Milligan College, Johnson City, Tenn., from where he was graduated in 1950. "He" took part in the Penn Relays one year.

Loved to Fly

They said he also was an accomplished swimmer and had been a lifeguard.

Francis loved to fly, his family said, since the age of 14 when he took his first plane ride at Princeton, W. Va.

"Flying always meant everything to that boy," his father said.

The pilot's mother had been taking his loss hard, the father said. "She heard all about his being shot down on the radio. We couldn't keep it from her."

"In the 10 years he's been flying, most of it he's been alone. Only a few times has there been anyone else in the plane."
